

POSSIBILITIES OF THE PEANUT

Healthful, Nutritious and Reduces the Cost of Living—Also Improves the Soil.

"Despise not the insignificant peanut," is the advice of C. M. Evans, superintendent of the extension department of A. & M. college.

While agriculturists are preaching the growing of peanuts as a proper crop to improve the soil, Mr. Evans goes one better and says that the peanut is a household delicacy which will reduce the cost of living and will provide the protein necessary to sustain life, build muscular tissues and cause red blood corpuscles to increase in the human being. Protein is the main nutrient of lean meat. Peanuts contain protein and therefore are a substitute for meat.

Mr. Evans says that peanuts also contain a large amount of fat and for this reason are acceptable. Plain roasted peanuts are always a healthy, well relished article of food for children between meals. These may be prepared by roasting in any ordinary oven with the hulls on them. If salted peanuts are preferred they can be prepared by shelling the fresh roasted nuts, and while they are hot sprinkling with enough melted butter to cause powdered salt to stick to them. For any purpose that nuts are required peanuts are always available. They require less work in hulling and they keep better than pecans or walnuts, or other nuts, which become rancid in hot weather. All kinds of candies may be made with peanuts and nut cookies.

The most common use of the peanut in the kitchen today is the making of peanut butter. It is prepared with fresh roasted peanuts ground in an ordinary grinder and seasoned to suit the taste. It is rich in protein and fat, and does not replace butter, but will replace meat or cheese. For the garden either variety may be used. The large, long is easier hulled. It has large peas and from three to five peas in each shell. The Spanish peanut has but two peas in the shell and they are quite small, but it far exceeds the large nut in flavor and the product is enough better in quality to justify the added work in shelling the small nuts.

Peanuts should be planted in rows three feet apart, twelve to sixteen inches apart in the drill. They should be planted as soon as the ground becomes thoroughly warm in the spring. If the land is well drained level cultivation is better than hills. The nuts need not be shelled before planting. Ordinary shallow cultivation is all that is required. The nuts can be harvested as soon as all of them are ripe.

Now is the time to plant peanuts, and every family can have its own supply. They are good in the home and they will produce the same result that wanted when meat is eaten.

LADIES TAKE UP SWIMMING CLUB PROPOSITION.

A called meeting of the Civic League was held Thursday afternoon for the consideration of the "swimming club" proposition submitted to the ladies of Bryan by Mr. O. E. Gammit. The ladies received the proposition most enthusiastically and a strong committee of twenty-five was appointed to get the clubs organized. The plan has been enlarged since it was started so that instead of 400 members, as was first contemplated, there will be over six hundred members.

The plans of the swimming pool and club house have been changed to accommodate this large membership and Delwood bids fair to have a country club that will be equal to any in the larger cities.

A LINE TO ITSELF.

Five years of roof work and study have put me in a position to give you the best work and material for the least money. I beg not to be confused with the traveling "coal tar lined" who makes a town but once, leaving a train of mourners behind him. I am here to stay and have a number of satisfied customers in the town and am ever ready to make any of my work satisfactory that proves otherwise.

I can save you money on anything in sheet metal building material. See ad.

I respectfully solicit a share of your business.

"GOOD" AND "BAD" TRUSTS.

The "good" and "bad" trust arguments are very well paralleled in the firearm regulations. If everybody were allowed to carry concealed weapons, some of them would no doubt use them to good purpose. Maybe others would make nuisances of themselves.

A good trust is one which will get a fellow down, and then let him up and "go halves" with him. A bad trust is one which will get the fellow down, and then beat the face off of him, after robbing his pockets of all they contain. The theory of the majority of the supreme court is that all trusts be considered "good" till they have slugged enough people to arouse public sentiment against them. The theory of the dissenting judge is to disarm all of them and compel them to walk the streets on even footing with ordinary citizens, and with the same rights and privileges.—Temple Telegram.

The American Born Princess.
My father, Prince Napoleon Lucien Charles, was in exile in the United States, and so it happened that I was born in America on the borders of the Delaware. I came into the world with the last sigh of the old year—that is to say, at midnight on the 31st of December, 1893. I have said that my father was in exile. When he was eleven years old his mother left Naples with her four children—two boys and two girls—and retired to the Chateau de Frohsdorf, taking the title of Comtesse de Lipona—Napoli transposed. There my father lived till he was joined by his uncle, the Emperor Napoleon's eldest brother, King Joseph of Spain, who on the fall of the first empire had retired to the United States and taken a lovely place near Bordentown, N. J., where he lived for eleven years as Count de Surville. It was at Bordentown that I entered this sorry world, my father having in 1831 married a Miss Carolina Georgina Fraser of Scotch origin, descending from the old family of Lovat.—Princess Caroline Murat's "Memoirs."

A Shock to Vanity.
"My wife gave me a birthday present that has a tendency to take the conceit out of any man who thinks he's good looking," said the man who shaves himself. "I confess that I have all along had a sort of sneaking idea that I had a little more than my share of manly beauty; that when it came to a showdown I was there with the goods. But not any more. I'm cured. And my wife's present did it. What was it? Why, simply one of those shaving glasses that magnify three times. The first time I used it I got a view of my face that rather startled me. Every blemish, every wild hair under the skin, every open pore, all the minute ugliness that isn't apparent to the naked eye—these things confronted me in all their magnified repulsiveness. I used the glass just once and then accidentally dropped it down the air shaft to the basement below. I don't want to look like a monstrosity every time I shave myself."—New York Times.

The Addition.
"What makes you act so grouchy this morning, Dobkins?"
"Had an addition to my family."
"What? Why, you ought to be ashamed to be gloomy over that! To think that a normal human being should be angry because of the advent of such a cherub! Do you actually grudge a place in your happy home to an innocent creature fresh from heaven, bringing with it the very fragrance of those celestial realms? Do you greet with an unwelcome chill a small epitome of all purity and sweetness given into your keeping as a priceless though undeserved treasure by a too benevolent Providence? A lovely copy of what fancy felix the angels to be like—a tiny shred of grace and glory snatched from the"—
"Say, that's very pretty, but do you know you're talking about my mother-in-law?"—New York Journal.

A Cow For a Life.
The Ober Gabelhorn is a peak notorious for the dangerous cornices which decorate its upper ridges. Of many accidents reported in connection with it perhaps the most remarkable, says G. D. Abraham in "Swiss Mountain Climbs," was the adventure which befell an amateur and his young guide. In passing along the dangerous final cornice it suddenly gave way under the amateur, and he went flying through space to apparent destruction. The guide at the other end of the rope seemed in hopeless plight, but with astounding presence of mind he flung himself down the opposite side of the ridge, thus saving two lives. The rope cut deep into the snow above, but held firm. The young guide's name was Ulrich Almer. His reward was a cow.

A Horticultural Puzzle.
"It's no use," sighs the nature wizard. "I may as well give up."
"What is bothering you?" we ask sympathetically.
"I got started a few years ago on a whim of mine. I took a head of cabbage and crossed it with a white potato and grew eyes on it; then I crossed that with a cornstalk and grew ears on it; then I crossed that with a squash and grew a neck on it; then I crossed that with a cocoon and grew hair on it, but hanged if I can figure out what to do for a nose and mouth!"—St. Louis Republic.

Already Outside.
"In the days of the ancient drama," said the pedantic person, "performances were given in the open air."
"What a discouragement that must have been," replied Miss Cayenne, "to the man who insists on going out of the theater to get a breath of fresh air."—Washington Star.

Poultry Pointer.
"I think," remarked the brindle faced old hen, "that I'll go into business."
"What kind of business?" asked the innocent young rooster.
"Well," clucked the old hen; "I may set up an egg plant."—Chicago News.

Two things in life that are hardest to find are a needle in a haystack and a self made man who is dissatisfied with his job.—Philadelphia Record.

WIRELESS STATION READY

A. & M. College Is Now in Touch with Other Wireless Stations in Texas.

A reporter for The Eagle accompanied Mr. J. B. Dickinson, of the wireless telegraph company, to A. & M. college this morning and was shown over the wireless station being erected there. The tower for the station is located on top of one of the new dormitories right near the electrical engineering building, and the sending and receiving office is located in the electrical building.

The extreme top of the tower from which the messages will be ejected into space is 187 feet above the ground. Heavy timbers are imbedded in the solid concrete of the roof of the building, and to these is fastened a tall steel windmill tower, and coming up through the center of this tower a pole extends some thirty or forty feet higher.

Small brass or copper wires run from the top of the pole into the sending office in the electrical building, and over these little wires the message is sent to the top of the pole and from there without wires, without chart or compass the silent message plunges into boundless space to be gathered up again by some other station a thousand miles away, caught by the operator at the sounder and by him transmitted into human thought and speech.

The college plant was completed today and A. & M. is now in touch with other wireless stations in Texas and as far away as Panama.

Generous Tramp.
"Please gimme a quarter," begged a panhandler on Washington street. "I won't hand yer no tale about bein' hungry, pard—honest, I wanten git a drink."

"But," we objected (for it was indeed us, "you don't need a quarter to buy a drink."
"Sir," answered the panhandler, "do youse tink I'm fallen so low as ter take a gent's money an' den not invite him ter drink wid me?"—Boston Traveler.
